Predictable outcome

A predictable, if not inevitable, outcome of the recent elections in the Philippines is the formation of a coalition government. This is a result of the political system in the Philippines, which is based on a two-party system. The two major parties, the Liberal Party and the United Nationalist Party, have formed a coalition government. This is a predictable outcome of the political system in the Philippines.

JS tightens entry rules even more

Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Commerce (MITI) has announced that it will tighten its entry rules for foreign companies. The new rules will require foreign companies to have a minimum of 10 years of experience in the Japanese market before they can apply for a license to operate in the country. This move is seen as a significant barrier to entry for many foreign firms, particularly those from the United States and Europe.
